Model Practices Overview

NACCHO's Model Practices Program honors and recognizes outstanding local public health practices from across the nation and shares and promotes these practice among local health departments (LHDs). Model and promising practices cut across all areas of local public health, including, but not limited to, community health, environmental health, emergency preparedness, infrastructure, governmental public health, and chronic disease.

Practices that are designated as model or promising are stored in the Model Practices Database so all LHDs can benefit from them. Since NACCHO began accepting Model Practices submissions in 2003, all winning practices have been placed in the searchable online Model Practices Database.

Model Practice vs. Promising Practice

- A practice will be designated as a Model Practice if it meets the following criteria: local health department role, collaboration, innovation, responsiveness, and evaluation (both process and outcome). There must be strong qualitative and quantitative evidence that the practice improves health outcomes.
- A practice will be designated as a Promising Practice if it meets the following criteria: LHD role/collaboration, innovation and responsiveness, and some qualitative and quantitative evidence, that practice improves health outcomes.
- If you have any questions or would like to know more about NACCHO's Model Practices Program, please contact the Model Practices team at practices@naccho.org or at (202) 783-5550.

Please read all the instructions and criteria carefully before filling out the application. Applications will be scored based only the information provided. Incomplete applications will not be considered.

The application consists of the following sections:

- Contact Information
- Abstract
- Overview
- Responsiveness and Innovation
- Local Health Department (LHD) and Community Collaboration and Implementation Strategy
- Evaluation
- Sustainability

Answer each section separately; do not combine sections. Please make sure to answer all questions in complete sentences. Also be mindful of typos and grammatical errors; poorly written applications may not be forwarded for review. Practices that are designated model or promising will be published online for the public. If selected, Model Practices winners may be asked to write an article for the Fall issue of the NACCHO Exchange.

All Model Practices applications must be submitted through NACCHO's online application process. NACCHO will not accept any application sent via e-mail, fax, or conventional mail. NACCHO recommends that applicants complete applications in a separate document before beginning to fill out the online version so that there is a backup copy.

While filling out the Model Practices application, keep in mind that the goal of the Model Practices Program is twofold: (1) to nationally honor and recognize outstanding local public health practice and (2) to promote the sharing of these outstanding practices among local health departments (LHDs).
